

Mockup: "Red Pencil" inline editing for MediaWiki; frictionless; perfect for quick fixes.
David McCabe <davemccabe@gmail.com> 18 August 2011.

"Who controls the past controls the future; who controls the present controls the past," said Oscar Wilde.

The sentence represents text on the article page; there is no need to enter a separate editing mode.

"Who controls the past controls the future; who controls the present controls the past," said Oscar Wilde.

The user selects some text, causing the "Edit" button to appear.

"Who controls the past controls the future; who controls the present controls the past," said Oscar Wilde.

," said Oscar Wilde.	Save
----------------------	------

"Who controls the past controls the future; who controls the present controls the past," said Oscar Wilde.

," said George Orwell.	Save
------------------------	------

"Who controls the past controls the future; who controls the present controls the past," said Oscar Wilde.

Saving changes...

"Who controls the past controls the future; who controls the present controls the past," said George Orwell.

Thanks for your help!

Optional steps:

1. Describe the change:

<input type="text"/>	OK
----------------------	----

2. Log in to get credit for the change:

Username	<input type="text"/>
Password	Log in

Create an account

"Who controls the past controls the future; who controls the present controls the past," said George Orwell.